

Greg York of Marvin Windows and Doors joins Tennessee Center for Performance Excellence (TNCPE) Board of Directors

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 4—The Tennessee Center for Performance Excellence announced that Greg York, director of operations for Marvin Windows and Doors of Tennessee, was appointed to the Tennessee Center for Performance Excellence board of directors.

York also serves on the Lauderdale County Tennessee Technology Center Advisory Board and is a member of the Development Committee for the University of Tennessee at Martin.

“TNCPE is an outstanding organization that offers tremendous value to individuals and companies seeking to achieve performance excellence,” said York. “This is important to me because successful businesses help support families, communities, and our state as a whole.”

At Marvin Windows and Doors of Tennessee, York is responsible for manufacturing operations in Tennessee, Honduras, and Nicaragua.

“Greg York has played a significant role in the success of Marvin’s Tennessee operations,” said Katie Rawls, TNCPE’s president and CEO. “I’m delighted he will now bring his insights and experience to TNCPE as a member of our board.”

York has over 22 years experience in operations management in a diverse range of disciplines and industries that include automotive, outdoor power equipment, furniture, and fenestration products. He received his bachelor of science in industrial engineering from Tennessee Technological University and his masters degree in engineering management from the University of Tennessee Knoxville.

Marvin Windows and Doors, based in Warroad, Minn., builds made-to-order wood and clad wood windows and doors. Its Tennessee operations are in Ripley. For more information about the company, visit www.marvin.com.

The non-profit Tennessee Center for Performance Excellence is an economic development organization that provides regional organizations access to low-cost performance improvement education and services. This is done primarily through the framework of an awards program based on the Baldrige National Quality Program. In addition, TNCPE provides educational opportunities throughout the year, including the Excellence in Tennessee Conference in February.
